For some people, using a car to go from point to point B simply is not enough. In reality, many have taken a car at the edge of destruction (or more) in the adventure name, research of strong emotions and, of course, for the great successful film names. To honor those men and women who have come with some creative ways to use a car, we collected five of the most scary car stunts we could find, and gathered them right here in no particular order. Some are famous and some are just absolutely crazy, but everyone involves a car and a lot of danger. Fortunately, in each of these examples, no one has remained injured in a permanent way - but this does not necessarily mean that they were completely either not unharmed all the most scary stunt car deeds come from the films, but this certainly makes it. Famous for its degree of difficulty, a 360-degree corkscrew jump has been performed by British Stunt Driver "Bumps" Willard in 1974 James Bond films, "the man from the golden gun", in a single take. This Barrel Acrobatics shot has successfully launched a red 1974 AMC Hornet X Hatchback Coupe Special outside an inclined ramp, causing him in half-air corkscrew during a tight river and then successfully on the opposite side. The car has been moving so quickly that the movie had to be slowed down so that the viewers to capture what was actually happened. The jump was thought years before the film was ever done and producers Harry Saltzman and Albert R. Broccoli took patents on the jump to prevent people from using it before he made his way into a movie. The bravata was the first of its kind to use a computer to calculate the jump, borrowing the use of some of the most sophisticated computers at the time at the Cornell University. In 2008, the British automotive exhibition, Top Gear, He tried to recreate the jump cork -Vite but he failed to pull him out. Top Gear supports the bravata has never been successfully successfully. Retained stunt car feature no ramps, jumps and speed. In 2008, a Chinese stuntman named Liu Nutazhu has successfully driven his car through the Miluo river in China, while the car balancing on two cables. It steel taken Nutshu, also called "The King Car," 30 minutes to drive its vehicle through the 150 feet suspended cables (45.7 meters) on the river. He moved slowly to ensure that all four tires remained on cables. Only two months of preparation were involved in the bravata, and the driver said the most difficult part has been in the last few minutes, when the steep slope blocked the rear view, making it difficult to align the rear tires with Cable. What is the longest jump ever attempted in a car? Discover on the next page. In 1976 stuntman kenny powers attempted one of the most extreme car acrobatics ever performed. Powers stepped in to Stunt Driver Ken Carter, which would originally have to jump, but couldn't. An eight-and-one-half ramp history was built above the San Lorenzo river in Morrisburg, Canada. Powers planning to skip your Rocket Powered Lincoln Continental on the River Largo a mile that separates Canada from the United States. It was the longest ever tought leap and would have shattered all the records - which is, if he had done years across. Five planning and more than $ 1 million was spent in preparation for the jump. Auto Powers', complete with small wings attached to the door, reached a maximum speed of 280 miles per hour (450.6 kilometers per hour) before launching off the end of the ramp. Just like the vehicle was in the air, several pieces of the car flown out (even the small wings) and a parachute deployed seconds before the car crashed into a shallow area Canadian river side. Powers have survived, but broke your back in failed attempt. Despite all the time and money put in this bravata, most people say the physical impairment of the jump condemned by the very beginning. To discover a found that cost much less, but raised the mail in play even higher than the mile jump long acrobatics, go to the next page. This bravata did not do any heights or jumps, but is one of the most famous car stunts ever pulled out. In 1978, a few director named Claude Lelouch wanted to film himself to run through the streets of Paris. The problem was this: he did not get all the permissions for stop traffic or close the roads. Instead, Lelouch tied a camera at the bumper of a Mercedes-Benz and started on a 9 minute wild on the streets of Paris. At 5:00 am in the morning. He dodged the traffic, pushed over the sidewalk, transported triumph throughout the triumph and went against one-time speed up to 140 miles per hour (225.3 kilometers per hour). He has never stopped the car during the entire race and treated everything in his path as an object to avoid. After almost 10 minutes of high speed, terrifying driving, Lelouch parks the car of him at the Sacra © Coeur basilica A © just like a woman ran up the stairs to meet him for a date. Lelouch opened his film to the public, and was arrested after the first projection to endanger the citizens of Paris during his reckless Stunt. While Guide this may not be a typical machine feat, it has all the ingredients of one Scary stunt car company: a car, high altitude and some thrill in search of a group adventurers. A of paratroopers in Arizona periodically roll out from the back of planes sitting in the old convertible and then jump out of the machine to complete the dive. Sometimes it can accommodate up to four or five people in the convertible at once, the divers stayed in the car as it is pushed out of the rear of the plane. After a few seconds of sitting of the car, the divers then jump out, while the convertible continues to precipitate to earth, usually spinning and throwing end up close in the process. During such a jump, parachutist olof zipster (after pushing the car out From the plane), he jumped out to film free fall of the car to the ground. He ended up getting a little too close to the vehicle and suddenly turned upside down and hit Zipster in his head. Another parachutist, who was moving the jump, so, captured the entire accident on tape. While the other jumpers landed in security, they wondered where Zipster was. The impact had given zipster a brain emotion, but fortunately, he was still able to open the parachute and land safely.
