The new update design is very disappointing for many reasons. First, the lack of originality: if I wanted to use tiktok, I would open tiktok. Secondly, a completely black "immersive" display. I find it rather distracting as the screen tries to morph and match all forms of photo to video aspect ratio, but all this creates either unnecessary screen clutter or large dead zones. It's also no longer possible to access stories unless you're at the start of your feed or hit one of the "breaks" where they're offered. I also prefer to have my phone in easy mode as it makes it easier to read. With the new update, white captions above a post can only be read by "clicking" on them. I miss the continuous scrolling feature and how much easier it was to read subtitles on a white background. There is also NO continuity between the black page and the rest of the pages that are still in white mode - it's just ugly. Finally, the removal of the continuous scrolling feature affected the playback of videos - they start before I get to them and I no longer have the option to turn them off (which is very frustrating!). I realize this was quite a long review, but I wanted to make my frustrations known in hopes that they would be legally resolved. Even on Instagram I am disappointed with this update. I'm using Instagram less and less and feel like it will stay that way as long as the update is constant. Android TV is integrated with the Google Assistant.
