How to download google play store for free. How to install google play store on windows. Google play store app for pc windows xp free download.

Whether this is your first smartphone or just your first using Android, there's a lot to love here, and it all starts with finding some apps to fill that new phone (or tablet) with. Google Play is the app store that Google runs, and it's also an important piece of Android's security as it scans apps before and after they're downloaded and monitors them for unusual activity. It can be a bit overwhelming when you first open up Google Play, but don't worry, we're here to help you get started!

If you already know the name of the app you're looking for, or have a specific app type in mind, you can search for it rather than browsing through app categories. Tap the Google Play icon on your home screen. Tap the white search bar at the top of the screen. Enter the name of the app (or type of app) you're looking for. Tap the search icon on your keyboard (should be in the location of the Enter key). If you're not quite as sure what you want, or your search results don't help you (don't worry, it happens to all of us), there are other ways to find apps on Google Play. How to browse apps in Google Play You can browse through Google Play's Top Charts to try and find a new app you want to install. Tap the Google Play icon on your home screen. Tap Top Charts underneath the Home tab. You're now ready to browse the charts for new apps. Swipe left and right between the charts for Top Free, Top Paid, Top Grossing, Top New Free, Top New Paid, and Trending. You can also browse through Google Play by category: Tap the Google Play icon on your home screen. Tap Categories underneath the Home/Games tabs. Tap the category you'd like to browse. Now, some app categories are just a series of Top Charts narrowed to that category of app, but other categories have featured apps and subcategories in addition to the Top Charts for that category. Once you've found one you like, it's time to install it. How to download free apps Tap on an app in the search results or categories. Tap Read more and look through the app's description and reviews to ensure the app seems right for you. Tap Install. The app will now download and install itself, usually in a few seconds depending on how large or small the app is. If you're on a device running an older version of Android, you'll have to agree to an app's permissions before it downloads. Read the permissions before clicking Agree. Once the app is finished installing, an Open button will appear in the same place the Install button previously occupied. How to buy paid apps The process for buying a paid app is just a hair different than downloading a free one, and it goes like this: Tap on an app you'd like to buy. Tap the price to bring up the payment options. Your default payment method will be shown. If you want to change your payment method, tap the down arrow next to your current payment method. Tap Payment methods. Tap one of your established payment methods. If you don't have one, you'll be prompted to add a credit card, PayPal account, or carrier billing. Tap Buy. Confirm your Google Play password or use your fingerprint to confirm your purchase. The payment is processed and the download will begin. Tap Continue to close the window. Apps need updates from time to time, and if you need to manually update your apps, here's how you do it. Swipe in from the left edge of the screen OR tap the three line menu icon in the top white bar to open the menu. Scroll down and tap Settings. Tap Auto-update apps. To turn off auto-update, select Do no auto-update apps. To enable auto-update on cellular data, select Auto-update at any time. If there are individual apps you do not want auto-updated, you can opt them out of auto-update while allowing your other apps to stay updated. Tap the app you don't want auto-updating. Tap the three dot menu icon in the top right corner of the screen (next to the search icon). Tap to uncheck Enable auto-update. How to uninstall apps Tap the app you want to uninstall. Tap Uninstall. For some paid apps within the refund window, this box might read Refund instead. A window will open confirming you want to uninstall the app. Tap OK. The app will now uninstall and remove itself from the device. How to remove apps from your app library If you install an app, don't like it, and uninstall it, it's still attached to your app history in the Library section of My apps & games. If you don't want an app in that list anymore, here's how you get rid of it. Tap the X to the right of the Install button on the app you want to remove from your library. A window will pop up asking you to confirm that you wish to remove this from your library. Tap OK. Your turn! What do you love about the Google Play Store? Find any good apps lately? Have you downloaded the Android Central app (opens in new tab) yet? If not, go do that, so you can keep up to date on the latest Android and Google news and have easy access to more helpful how-to content! Updated May 2018: The steps and photos in the article have been cleaned and updated to reflect changes to Google Play's layout and appearance. Windows XP will be getting even less secure next year, when Google stops updating Chrome for users of Microsoft's nearly geriatric operating system. The company announced today that PCs running XP and Vista will be able to keep using Chrome after April 2016, but Google will cease providing updates to its browser, including security-focused patches. That same deal goes for Mac users running OS 10.6, 10.7 and 10.8. Google said it was turning off the updates because the makers of all five OSs had stopped providing official support for them. "Such older platforms are missing critical security updates and have a greater potential to be infected by viruses and malware," Chrome Director of Engineering Mark Pawliger said in a blog post announcing the decision. Google said earlier this year that it planned to stop supporting old operating systems, and called out XP in particular as a problem. Microsoft's operating system, while more than a decade old, is still clinging to life on computers in homes and organizations large and small. Microsoft ended support for XP last year, but some organizations (including the U.S. Navy) haven't completely made the jump yet. This is also bad news for people who want to keep old Intel Macs limping along with new versions of Chrome. Google didn't provide a version of its browser for older computers using PowerPC processors, which are stuck on OS 10.6.8, but other computers including the mid- and late-2006 editions of the iMac can't upgrade to a supported operating system. It's a tough spot to be in, but come April, there won't be much of a choice for those people who want their old computer to still have a secure version of Chrome. Either they update their hardware, or they get left behind. This story has been updated at paragraph six to correct Google Chrome's availability for PowerPC Macs. By Sofi Soloman | computer image by martini from Fotolia.com Microsoft Windows XP drivers enable hardware devices to run effectively. Windows XP stores drivers in at least two easily accessible locations on the computer. Microsoft provides additional sources for drivers and driver updates. The Device Manager lists the drivers used by hardware devices installed on the computer. Access the Device Manager from the Start menu. Right click "My Computer" and then click "Properties." From System Properties, click the "Hardware" tab and then click the "Device Manager" button. Find the drivers listed under the appropriate device. Right click the driver and click "Properties" for additional driver information. To find drivers stored in the Software Environment files, open the "Run" command box found on the start menu. Type "msinfo32" into the box and press "OK." The System Information window displays an expandable menu on the left. Expand the Software Environment folders to find the drivers. XP drivers are also found on the original Microsoft Windows XP disc. Driver updates and upgrades are available online from Microsoft or other online vendors. Google's Play Store is where most Android users shop for new apps. If you're new to Android, you might not even realize there are other—and in some cases, better—options. Here are three Google Play Store alternatives I recommend. * Amazon Appstore for Android. You don't have to own a Kindle Fire to download apps to an Android device from Amazon's Appstore. To install Amazon's Appstore on your Android, however, you'll need to take a few extra steps, such as ensuring your device can download from "unknown sources." How you set that up can depend on your Android device. On my Samsung Galaxy Note, for instance, I went into Settings > Security > Device administration and checked "Unknown sources." (Business Insider recently posted a video showing how to install Amazon Appstore on non-Amazon Android devices.) Why bother with Amazon's Appstore? Though it is more limited than Google's Play Store in terms of available apps, Amazon offers paid apps for free every day, many of which are games. You might also find some discounts on apps you wouldn't find elsewhere. * Tablified Market. Tablified is available in the Google Play Store, and it does a far better job than Google of showcasing Android tablet-optimized apps. The $2 Pro version doesn't have ads, it lets you sort every category by free and paid apps, and you can search by rating and more. It's worth the upgrade price, especially if you've just invested in a new Android tablet and want to zero in on tablet apps. (For more about Tablified, read my review "Looking for Android Tablet Apps? Get Tablified.") * AppBrain is another free app you can download from the Google Play Store. Along with showcasing new and hot apps of the day, AppBrain scans the apps on your device, then gives you solid recommendations (at least in my case) on other apps you might like. There are additional alternative app stores for Android including SlideME and GetJar, both of which are worth a look. Beware, though, that allowing downloads from "unknown sources," and downloading apps from alternative app stores in general, may put your Android device at risk. Then again, downloading apps from Google's Play Store isn't 100 percent safe either. If you plan to download lots of apps, install a trustworthy security app. In my experience, TrustGo's Antivirus & Mobile Security app does a good job of scanning app downloads and warning of potential threats—and it's free.
