They are rooted in New Year's Spera, symbolic to direct evil, for red envelopes known as "Hongbao" containing money Originally given to children to protect them from the disease of health. Cleaning is traditional for families to clean their homes and areas around before the beginning of the New Year. The word  $\hat{A} \ \hat{e} \ \hat{c} \ \hat{a} \ \hat{e} \ \hat{c} \ \hat{$ in Chinese poetry, a couplet is a pair of poetry lines adhering to certain rules: both lines should have the same number of Chinese characters, the tone of a line must be reversed to the And the meaning of the two lines needs to be related, with each pair of characters corresponding to meanings also related. The custom of attaching dations to doors, often written in calligraphy on the red paper, before the Chinese New Year can be traced as later as the state of later shu (934-965), there are thousand years, where people would hang A piece of wood peach in order to protect against evil. In the dynasty of music, the dations would be written in Madeira to express the good votes of people. The food is customary throughout China to eat cookies during this commemorative time. In the provinces of northern China, the Jiaozi, a dumpling made with flour and often filled with coins, peanuts or sweets, symbolizing different bonções, is enjoyed at midnight in the New Year's VÃ © Spera While Tangyuan, sweet glutinous rice cookies, are eaten in South Chinese provinces such as Guangdong. Jiaozi means wealth and prosperity; Its shape resembles the old chinese ingot, a coin used to the XX season, while rounding the tangyuan cookies represent the family unit and the meeting. Red red color is an important color in New Year celebrations as it symbolizes a bright and happy future. It is a significant color related to Chinese folk histories such as Nian in which red banners were displayed in houses to scare the monster that would visit every new year Chinese. Coins during the Qin dynasty, the elderly would fill eight coins with a red rope and give them to the children of the family. These coins were often referred to as  $\hat{a} \in \mathbb{T}^{m} \to \mathbb{T}$ the evil spitters, or â € œHA" ya sui gianà Â â "¢ and I believed to protect the person from the disease . These currencies have been replaced in later years by red envelopes. Red envelopes almost always even as numbers pieces are associated with money given in funerals. The number eight is considered lucky, because it sounds like the word for  $\sim \hat{a} \notin \hat{a} \hat{a} \notin \neg \hat{a} \notin \hat{a} \hat{e}$ . Smooth  $\tilde{A} \notin \hat{a} \notin \hat{a} \hat{e} \hat{a} \hat{e}$  and symbolizes having a gentle year. year.
