Only 13% of PS3 users have seen a movie in their game consoles If you think Blu-ray Disc Association (BDA), millions of PlayStation 3 players around the world are watching movies on their consoles. That's not true, says the HD DVD man Olivier Van Wynendaele, and actually doesn't work for HD DVD movies on the Xbox 360 either. Van Wynendaele - who is the spokesman for the HD DVD Promotion Group - made the statements during an exclusive interview with Tech.co.uk made yesterday. He also said that most PS3 owners did not know that their consoles could play movies, point: "[According to] the independent figures we have from independent research companies and so on, it seems that 60% of the owners of video game consoles do not know they can play movies - either DVD or Blu-ray - on PS3. That means at least 60% is not active." Even between the remaining 40%... 13% is using their game console as a player, and the rest is not. People buy their consoles to play, not to watch movies." The HD DVD experience For more tests, Van Wynendaele appealed to Microsoft's record with the HD DVD plugin for the Xbox 360: "The attachment rate is less than two digits. So [Microsoft has] sold a lot, but it's an expensive accessory for a game console. It was the cheapest HD DVD player on the market, but even less than 10% of the console users [Xbox 360] bought it." He also said Microsoft's own research had concluded that console users play a game for an average of 400 hours, but they only spend three hours a month watching movies. "That's why on the PlayStation 3 side we don't see why players would behave differently. That on Microsoft's side. "Perhaps someone in the Blu-ray field would like to explain it?
